THE FREDERICK S. KNOBLOCH COLLECTION

Coins of the Roman Republic

Frederick S. Knobloch's name is well-known to all experienced collectors of Ancient coins. Virtually every distinguished collection of recent years has fine pieces that once were his, or had passed through his hands. The contents of this catalogue, demonstrate his sharp eye for a fine coin, discriminating taste and sense of history.

Stack's was privileged in June, 1970 to sell Mr. Knobloch's Ancient Greek coins. Coin Galleries, Stack's Foreign and Ancient Department, sold a selection of Knobloch Roman Republican and Roman Imperial coins in November, 1975 and March, 1977 respectively. We are now pleased to offer the heart of Mr. Knobloch's splendid group of Republican pieces, giving the serious and sophisticated collector an unusual opportunity to acquire specimens of superb quality as well as of high rarity.

While the earliest Roman coins were rudely cast in bronze, the bulk of Republican issues consisted mainly of silver Denarii, followed by a limited series of struck bronzes and infrequent issues of gold. The Denarii reveal a wide variety of design, embellished by the addition of symbols, control marks and monograms. The first types show the head of Roma and the Dioscuri (the heavenly twins, Castor and Pollux) with other deities introduced later. In due course they carry designs referring to the moneyers' families. In the final stage the types allude to contemporary events and personalities of the late Republic. Without question much of early Roman history is graphically pictured on its coinage.

The Knobloch Collection provides excellent examples of all phases of Roman Republican coinage, as is shown by the Order of Sale provided for this catalogue. The Collection begins with 23 pieces of bronze Aes Grave of unusually fine quality, including specimens of the various denominations and series, as well as examples of the cast coinages of non-Roman Italy. The Denarii which follow are particularly rich in mythical and geneological symbolism. In addition, many of the coins also depict the objects and tools of everyday Roman life in the 1st century B.C. For example, the Denarii of L. Julius Bursio (lots 338-366) show a ladder, vases, knives, a pitchfork, tongs and mallets. On those of L. Roscius Fabatus (lots 521-533) can be found a wine skin, candelabra, a pulley, a chicken coop, a currycomb, shears and a comb. Perhaps the most famous example of the genre is the reverse of the Denarius of T. Carisius (lots 576 and 577) picturing the coinage implements of the time.

Of all the excellent specimens to be found here, perhaps the most impressive are the 178 "Imperial" coins, those pieces struck by, or associated with Julius Caesar, Brutus and Cassius, Mark Anthony and Lepidus, Sextus Pompey and Octavian. The portraiture on them presages that of the Empire. In all their variety, they truly make history come alive.

The coins are presented as Mr. Knobloch collected them, with the arrangement and dating according to E.A. Sydenham, The Roman Republican Coinage, London 1952 (Syd.). The Aes Grave are also catalogued according to E.A. Sydenham, Aes Grave, London, 1926 (A.G.), and all coins, where useful and appropriate, according to H.A. Grueber, Coins of the Roman Republic in the British Museum, London, 1910 (BMC). The publication of Michael H. Crawford, Roman Republican Coinage, Cambridge, 1974, brought with it a dating and sequential arrangement different from that of Sydenham, as well as alternative descriptions of types and assignments to mints. In recognition of these factors, each coin is also given a Crawford number (Craw.).

- Sydenham notes that "The occurrence of the above three issues, with reverse types similar to those issued 125-120 B.C., appears to have no exact parallel in the Republican coinage. The evidence of finds leaves practically no doubt that these issues are not contemporary with their prototypes of 125-120 B.C., but were struck shortly before 85 B.C. Therefore, the most reasonable explanation of them is that they are 'Restitutions'." Crawford dates them to 82-80 B.C. and states them clearly to be Sullan issues.*

The Denarii of Q. Pomponius Musa

The punning allusion to his name led the moneyer Q. Pomponius Musa to use ten types on his coinage: the representations of Hercules and the Nine Muses. The workmanship is excellent and the dies must have been executed by skillful engravers. Hercules, as leader of the choir, is represented playing on his lyre, and the Muses are shown with their various attributes. These figures provide an interesting comparison with statues preserved from ancient times. Eight of the Muses are portrayed on specimens in the Knobloch Collection, all of which are in exceptional states of preservation. Not included is Syd. 814, with Erato, the Muse of Erotic Poetry. Seaby notes, perhaps with tongue in cheek, that "it seems strange that this piece is so very much rarer than all the others."

Lot No. 720

A much discussed piece, assigned by some (e.g. Eckhel) to L. Brutus. Certainly the obverse type is copied from the denarius of Brutus (Syd. 906). Head, Historia Numorum, p. 289, notes that the coin must have been issued by an independent dynast, Coson, from Scythia rather than Thrace. The obverse monogram has been interpreted as BR for Brutus by some. Head makes it OLB for Olbia, the mint. Bahrfeldt avers that the monogram is BA for Basileus.
